LEAVING A LEGACY: PROFILES IN GIVING
“I expect to pass through this world but once; any good thing therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any fellow creature, let me do it now; let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.”

—Etienne de Grellet
Besides attending Green Mountain College, Barbara “Bunny” Gedrow Purvis ’50, Eleanor Nichols Aurand ’41, and Dr. Lloyd Bartholomew ’39 had at least one other thing in common – they were among the first in their respective families to attend college.

In each case, entering the world of higher education required sacrifice, dedication and hard work. They were also fortunate to receive financial assistance from their families, academic scholarships or aid through the G.I. Bill. They impressed on their own children the importance of higher education, and came to see a college degree as an essential passport to future success.

With the support of their family members, the legacy of Bunny, Eleanor and “Dr. Bart” will include extending the same educational benefits to GMC students they will never meet.

In speaking with their families, I know their generosity stems from an understanding that more and more students find higher education unattainable because of its prohibitive cost, and from their impulse to give back to an institution that gave them so much.

We honor them in the pages of this year’s Giving Report, and we honor all of you for doing your part to help a new generation of Green Mountain College students achieve the same great things.

Sincerely,

Paul J. Fonteyn
President
Tom Aurand, pictured at his home in Minneapolis. In May, Tom and his sister Sally established the Eleanor Nichols Aurand ’41 Endowed Scholarship, which will be awarded to a Green Mountain College student who comes from a rural New England background and who wants to pursue a career in the food and food service industry.
Food, family and education were all of paramount importance for Eleanor Nichols Aurand ’41, who grew up on a small family farm in Enosburg, Vt., and later developed a successful career in the food service industry in Raleigh, N.C. Family members joke that she referred to herself as “Just a farm girl from Vermont,” after moving to North Carolina in the late 1940s.

Eleanor’s father, George L. Nichols, had to drop out of school and take over the family dairy farm in Enosburg, Vt., when his father suddenly died. George was determined that his children would get an education, and he succeeded in sending all nine of them to college during the difficult depression years.

“Their farming methods were pretty scientific for the time,” recalls Eleanor’s son Tom. “They introduced a breeding program to build a high-production herd. Their farm included a sawmill and one of the largest sugarbushes in Vermont.”

The Nichols house was filled with books and laughter, and George made sure all his children, including the girls, learned how to drive a car. The lessons in hard work and self-reliance were not lost on Eleanor.

After high school, she went to GMC, working part-time jobs to support her studies. Later on she earned her bachelor’s degree at the University of New Hampshire.

It was at UNH that she met her future husband Leonard Aurand, an agricultural scientist who went on to earn his Ph. D and joined the faculty of North Carolina State University as a founding member of the department of food science.

While raising three children, she launched her own successful career. She managed food programs at the Combs Elementary School and then worked as director of food service for the Governor Morehead School for the Blind in Raleigh. Throughout her life, she demonstrated a passion for food production and the sustainable farming community.

Eleanor took a personal interest in the careers of many students and colleagues. Her passion also became something of a family occupation—both Tom and his sister Sally have established careers in food science and Tom’s son is also in the field.

“My mother always wanted to use her legacy to give opportunities to others,” said Sally. “She was always grateful for her education at GMC, and she would be glad to know we’re helping other students get the same opportunity.”

Tom is now president of Aurand & Associates, LLC, a food technology consulting company, based in St. Paul, Minn., focusing on developing technology in the dairy, fruit and nutraceutical industries. Tom is also active at several universities in promoting food science as a career. Prior to forming his own company, Tom served in senior research and development management positions in the dairy, fruit and frozen food industries.

Sally graduated with a bachelor’s degree in food science. While raising her own family, she got a job at Abbott Laboratories which launched her career in quality control in the pharmaceutical industry.

“Mom and Dad made sure all three of us went to college and graduated without debt,” said Sally. “Mom said her salary went to pay the college bills. We were very fortunate that our parents were so helpful.”

After Eleanor died in May of 2014, the Aurands set up The Eleanor Nichols Aurand Endowed Scholarship which will be awarded to a Green Mountain College student who comes from a rural New England background and wants to pursue a career in the food and food service industry.

The scholarship was established at a time of great opportunity, when Green Mountain College is enjoying national recognition as a pioneer in introducing sustainable agriculture and food production into its traditional liberal arts curriculum.
Jule Purvis is 89 years old, but his alert voice, inflected with a friendly North Carolina accent, seems to belong to a much younger man.

He lives in Belhaven, N.C., on the mainland across Pamlico Sound from Cape Hatteras in the home his grandfather built. But his travels in the military and his career at General Electric took him many places before he and his wife, the late Barbara “Bunny” Louise Gedrow Purvis ’50, finally moved there in 1995.

Jule went to school in Belhaven and enlisted in the Navy during World War II. He served as an aerial gunnery instructor in an air patrol squadron based in Florida, which flew long-range reconnaissance missions over the Caribbean.

After the war he enrolled at Duke University, landing a job shortly thereafter in General Electric’s finance department in Schenectady. A friend introduced him to Bunny, who had recently graduated from GMC. At the time she was working for New York State Telephone in Albany. The couple courted, got married in 1952, and settled into a busy life raising their two children, Julie and Jay. Jule worked as a traveling auditor and financial manager for GE, and the family lived for a time in Marblehead, Mass., before settling in Hendersonville, N.C. He retired in 1987 after 38 years with GE, and the couple enjoyed extensive travel over the next 20 years.

“Bunny always spoke with great fondness about GMC. She remained in touch with some of her classmates and the whole experience really made a big impact on her life,” Jule remembers.

Bunny and Jule were regular donors to the Green Mountain College annual fund. When Bunny died in 2010, after 58 years of wonderful married life, Jule began to consider more lasting ways to contribute to GMC in his wife’s memory.

“I’ve established scholarships at four different schools, including Green Mountain, in memory and honor of my wife, children and brother,” he said. “One of the reasons I do that is my education at Duke University didn’t cost me a single dime. It was all paid for on the G.I. Bill. I had great opportunities. So this is a way for me to give back.”

Jule understands the high cost of a college education today. The last time he checked Duke’s tuition and fee schedule, he saw the cost for attending the university was approximately $60,000 a year. He recalls when $5 was a sufficient weekly food allowance during his 1943 college year at North Carolina State.

“Kids today really have it tough,” he says. “When I hear about students graduating with $200,000 in debt . . . well that’s just staggering to me. I don’t have an answer to the problem, but I want to do what I can to help.”

Jule provided a lump sum to GMC and instructed the College to provide $10,000 to $12,000 annually in financial assistance to rising juniors and seniors who have difficulty meeting the cost of education.

He cited GE’s matching program as an important factor in increasing the value of the scholarship. “I have to hand it to my employer—the company matched every dollar we contributed. So the amount is double what it would have been, thanks to GE.”

Jule now has time to enjoy life in his family home and consider ways he can still make a difference. His generosity is helping current GMC students realize their dreams.

“I don’t care about the recognition. I had lots of opportunities, and I just want to put my success to work for people who need help now.”

Dr. Lloyd Bartholomew ’39 passed away in April. Current and past trustees and friends honored his longtime dedication to the College by establishing a scholarship in his name. “He was really proud of the College’s environmental mission,” said his daughter-in-law, Dr. Lynne Shuster. “He was always thinking about GMC—about ways he could give back.”
Lloyd G. Bartholomew ’39, or “Dr. Bart” as he was familiarly known in Green Mountain College circles, grew up on a small family dairy farm in Whitehall, N.Y., but spent most of his medical career at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. He would often return to the farm in the summer, packing up the family station wagon and driving east. One day, they arrived in the middle of the haying season on an afternoon that threatened rain.

“Immediately he got out of the car, took off his suit jacket and tie, and jumped onto the tractor,” recalls his daughter Lynne Bartholomew Kreiner. “He knew the hay had to come in before the rain started.” It was typical of the diligence and generosity Dr. Bart showed throughout his life. He died this spring in Rochester, but his legacy lives on through a scholarship established in his name. The scholarship will be awarded this fall to an incoming GMC student with an interest in the sciences.

“He was very actively involved in procuring funds for medical students at the University of Minnesota,” said his son Doug Bartholomew. “Knowing that the Lloyd G. Bartholomew Memorial Scholarship will go towards helping students afford college—that would mean a lot to him.”

Dr. Bart’s younger sister, Jane Bartholomew Graham, recalls that the family kept about 40 milking cows on their dairy farm. The children were educated in a one-room schoolhouse so small that one year Dr. Bart was the only member of his class. She believes the hardscrabble life—balancing schoolwork with the many chores at home—had a lot to do with his strong work ethic. An avid student, he graduated high school at age 15 and went on to Green Mountain Junior College.

He took the bus to Poultney with other Whitehall students, and served as the manager of the football team. It was at GMC where he met his wife Betty.

While attending the University of Vermont School of Medicine during World War II, he was called into the army and served as commanding officer of a hospital in Bremerhaven, Germany. Arriving about the time hostilities ended in Europe, he supervised care for wounded Allied servicemen and some victims of the Holocaust.

Dr. Bart completed medical training at Dartmouth and Mayo, and was appointed to the Mayo Clinic staff in 1953. At the Mayo Clinic, Dr. Bart was head of the gastroenterology section from 1967-1977. He published over 120 articles in peer-reviewed journals during his career and authored several medical textbook chapters. His many awards included the Department of Internal Medicine Henry J. Plummer Distinguished Clinician Award from the Mayo Clinic.

“He was very humble and he would never brag about it, but I think the Plummer award was very important to him because it honored superb clinical care among hundreds of top-notch practitioners,” said Bart’s daughter-in-law, Dr. Lynne Shuster, Lloyd Jr.’s wife who is also a physician at Mayo. “Patients would seek him out even decades after he was out of practice—he touched the lives of so many people.”

His research acumen was prodigious. He was called upon to fact-check for Rachel Carson’s Silent Spring, the book credited with launching the modern environmental movement (Dr. Bart’s contributions are recognized in the book’s forward).

He never forgot Green Mountain College, serving on the College’s Board of Trustees as chairman from 1997-2003. He received an honorary doctorate of human letters from GMC in 1984 and was elected to the College’s Athletic Hall of Fame in 2006.

“Green Mountain College meant such a great deal to him,” said Dr. Lynne Shuster. “He was really proud of the College’s environmental mission. He was always thinking about GMC—about ways he could give back.”

Tracy Williams Haines ’78 balances a challenging job as assistant to the director of the Hood Museum of Art at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., with a physically active lifestyle. A former triathlete (she was a nationally ranked competitor for many years), Tracy loves living in the Connecticut River’s Upper Valley area, which affords plenty of opportunities for running, swimming, biking, snowshoeing and walking her two shelties, King Arthur and Bogie.

She appreciates the fact that her father, now retired from a career at Cornell University, planned carefully and worked hard to put her and her two siblings though college. Tracy feels an acute sense of responsibility for how best to leave her own legacy.

“It’s never too early to plan for the future and have your estate plan in place. I decided that one of the best ways I could give back to the school that gave me so much was to include GMC in my estate plans. I want to be sure future generations of students can have the same advantages that I had.”
